

The Sinister Plot Behind Artificial Intelligence

There is a book that was written thousands of years ago that states there will come a time when cash will be done away with, and that transactions of any kind would be done using artificial intelligence with your own personal identification number on the back of your hand or on your forehead.

When this book was written such a thing was impossible, but now the day is almost here when because of theft and other means. The intention of having your unique identification number on your forehead or under the skin of the back of your hand is so that the person could have their pin number could be scanned just like the barcodes on any supermarket product.

Let's take a look at how the cashless society is being brought in. In several parts of the world banks are reducing the number of cash points not because the customers have asked for this to happen, not because it is too costly for the banks to continue the cash machines, but is to force people to use the technology that the banks want them to use.

Theft of PIN numbers will continue to take place until they bring in a fool proof system of putting all your information on a microchip, this would put an end to identification theft but it will also be one step then to governments having complete control over what you buy or sell. If they disagree with how you are using your money then they can block your transaction so you would not be able to buy or sell anything without their approval. This is only one step away from the government having total control over what is said from the pulpit and one step away from making it illegal to evangelise on the street.

How would they bring in such a government is very easy just by forcing everybody to do all transactions on computer, and when your password is stolen along with your personal identity the public would plead for this system to be brought in. There is a computer in the city of Brussels that is even now capable of recording and or blocking any and every transaction on earth made in this way. Because it is so large it is called "The Beast".

This microchip with all your medical history, workplace history and other details that they may regard as relevant is known as the mark of the beast. The book clearly states that if you receive this mark even in ignorance (which is in fact impossible) then you will never know a life without suffering, never again know peace of mind because you can only receive this mark if you agree to worship the one they call god. Not the real god at all, but the devil himself.
